Beale begins ORI prep with base exercise

By Capt. Geoffrey Fischer
9th RW plans and programs

An Operational Readiness Inspection for the 9th Reconnaissance Wing is set for November, but the preparation starts with a base exercise Wednesday to Jan. 23.

The ORI will be broken down into two phases. The first phase tests Beale's ability to deploy our airmen and regenerate our deployed aircraft. The second tests our ability to do our job in a hostile environment.

"The ORI will test every aspect of our wing's ability to deploy, regenerate and then operate from a forward location," said Lt. Col. Troy Devine, 9th RW chief, plans and programs. "Operations ENDURING and IRAQI FREEDOM have clearly demonstrated Team Beale's ability to get the job done. Our scheduled operational readiness inspection and our preparatory wing-wide exercises will enable us to further refine our warrior skills and showcase them to Headquarters Air Combat Command."

"For next week's Operational Readiness Exercise we're examining Phase II ORI events," said Mr. Gary Taft, 9th RW plans and programs. "The exercise will start at a forward deployed location and the tasks include: combat employment, the ability to survive and operate, also called ATSO, in a nuclear, chemical, and biological environment, and mission support."

Yet, that doesn't include everything that will happen during the exercise.

"This ORE will be broad-based and straight forward with no intended curve balls," said Lt. Col. John Winstead, 9th RW deputy chief, plans and programs. "Our goal is to baseline the 9RW and determine where to focus our future exercises."

"We want everyone to exercise their processes—look for ways to improve and streamline them," said Col. Winstead. "As you're going through the exercise family see ORI page 5

Space commander visits Team Beale

By Senior Airman Tim Jenkins
9th RW public affairs

The commander of Air Force Space Command visited Beale Jan. 8 and 9 during a two-day trip to the Western United States.

Gen. Lance Lord completed a site visit to the 7th Space Warning Squadron and spent time visiting other Beale units.

"I'm really impressed with Team Beale, General Wright, Lieutenant Colonel Dave Sutton and what I saw at the 7th Space Warning Squadron," said Gen. Lord. "There's a great partnership here, not only with respect to the missions with Team Beale, but also with the people from the local community. Beale is a great place to live and work and we're really proud from Air Force Space Command to be partnered with Air Combat Command through Team Beale."

Gen. Lord began his visit Friday at the 7th SWS, where he had breakfast with the troops, received a mission and missile defense brief and toured the Phased Array Warning System (PAVE PAWS) radar site.

"General Wright and his team talk about offensive intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance," said Gen. Lord. "Those kinds of capabilities are exactly what we're achieving in space with space superiority. The missions of the 7th SWS, with its missile warning, space tracking and radar capa-

Core values not cliché, but a way of life

By Col. Brian Kistner
 376th Expeditionary Mission Support Group commander

MANAS AIR BASE, Kyrgyz Republic (AFPN) — Most of us encounter situations in life we do not always agree with. Positive results can stem from how we respond to these situations. All of us in the armed forces have a sacred duty to adhere to the highest standards of military conduct. We have a wide range of choices; from turning a blind eye and doing nothing to confronting situations head on and ensuring we adhere to standards.

Whatever the case, rules and standards must be adhered to at all costs. They form the backbone for our acceptable way of life. Just about everywhere you look, there are rules and standards to be followed to effectively meet an end.

In the military, and the Air Force in particular, without standards we become just another segment of society versus the most trusted segment of society.

Without our high standards, we would, not be able to prosecute the nation's wars.

To help avoid confusion, the Air Force adopted three core values that spell out what we are all about: integrity first, excellence in all we do and service before self. These values are not cliché; they are the basic common values that enable people in the United States Air Force to perform the mission.

Of these values, integrity must be first, for without integrity we have nothing. We must always strive to do the right things for the right reasons. We must all know we can trust the person to the right and to the left of us to be forthright and to watch our back in a fight.

Our countrymen have put a great deal of faith in us to take the moral high ground when defending our country. We are called on to fight and win the wars that guarantee our freedoms.

As an armed force, Americans require much from us and we must be prepared to deliver. We have to give our personal best and be cognizant of how we conduct ourselves.

Adherence to standards does not require a super human effort that does not allow for mistakes. Rather, adherence requires an honest straightforward approach and the best effort we can put forward.

Doing the right things for the right reasons means simply, when presented with a tough decision, confronting the situation head on and doing what is right even when it is uncomfortable.

When faced with misbehavior by a subordinate, for example, it might be easier to turn a blind eye and do nothing vs. administering the tough justice our profession requires.

This situation quickly becomes an integrity issue and one that has far reaching implications. When the chips are down, people will fail to do what is right if we do not hold them to this same standard in performing their daily duties. When we fail to do the right thing, the repercussions are far reaching because in the profession of arms we all potentially may be faced with life and death decisions.

If we allow complacency and inaction to erode the fabric of our military through the lack of adherence to standards and our core values, then we threaten the very existence of the institution we hold so dear and the rest of the nation relies upon so heavily to fight and win wars.

Standards and core values aren't cliché. They are what set us apart from the rest of society and what make us the best most trusted air and space force in the world.

All of us in the armed forces have a sacred duty to adhere to the highest standards of military conduct.

Voluntary NCO retraining begins

By Tech. Sgt. David Jablonski
Air Force Print News

The Air Force needs 1,100 noncommissioned officers in surplus career fields to voluntarily retrain into shortage career fields to balance the enlisted force in 2004.

The voluntary phase of the fiscal 2004 NCO Retraining Program began Jan. 5 and ends Feb. 23. The program helps balance the enlisted force by moving staff, technical and master sergeants from specialties with surpluses to specialties with shortages.

Imbalances in the mid-level NCO grades among specialties occur as a result of personnel force structure changes, differing retention trends among specialties, and the equality of promotions across all skills.

If needed, personnel officials will resort to an involuntary retraining phase March 8 through April 26.

"While every effort is made to attract volunteers, some NCOs may be selected for involuntary retraining if the number of volunteers falls short," said Lt. Col. Kim Haney, chief of the Air Force skills requirements branch at the Pentagon. "The enlisted force is not perfectly balanced so we have to take some action to get as close as possible."

The Air Force's fiscal 2003 retraining program was the first action taken in five years, Col. Haney said. Some NCOs did not act upon the opportunities presented to them and as a result were involuntarily retrained.

"It's really in the best interest for those identified for retraining to take action and investigate the possibilities," Col. Haney said.

Tech. Sgt. Derek Hughes, NCO in charge of Air Force enlisted retraining at the Air Force Personnel Center at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, said he believes more people identified for retraining in 2004 will consider their options and seek out opportunities.

"I believe that we'll be more successful in the voluntary portion this year because people learned last year that the Air Force was serious about the program. People who were vulnerable, who didn't make their own choice, had it made for them," Sgt. Hughes said.

"Last year we identified people for retraining by name and we're doing that again. They'll get a notice from PC-III saying they're vulnerable," Sgt. Hughes said.

A Web page shows them how vulnerable they are and where they stand on a list of their peers by Air Force Specialty Code and grade. The Web page is available at www.afpc.randolph.af.mil/enlskills/retraining/retraining/htm. Users must log onto their virtual MPF account to view the data.

The voluntary phase is not limited to individuals identified on the list. Anyone matching the specialty code and grade, who is otherwise eligible, can apply for retraining during the voluntary phase.

"Last year, there weren't enough volunteers in Phase 1, so we did a non-vol phase," Sgt. Hughes said. "And even after that, 200 people still didn't submit applications, so we had to pick jobs for them. They chose not to decide and were not necessarily happy with results. We'd rather tell them how to be proactive and how to find something that would interest them."

A complete list of retraining-in opportunities is available on the retraining advisory at local military personnel flights.

Vulnerability listings for retraining-out by grade and specialty code will be updated on a weekly basis. The MPF also provides real-time updates for applications and actual program status numbers.

Eligibility criteria

Noncommissioned officers are eligible for retraining under the fiscal 2004 noncommissioned officer retraining program if they meet the following criteria:

a. They are on their second or subsequent enlistment.

b. Current or projected grade is staff sergeant through master sergeant (requirements will be based on grade). If projected for promotion, all individuals must apply for Air Force Specialty Codes with shortages in their projected grade.

c. Applicants must have a total active federal military service to date of:

(1) Master sergeants - 8602 and later

(2) Tech. sergeants and staff sergeants - 8802 and later

Note: Second term senior airmen may apply for staff sergeant quotas provided their TAFMSD is 9702 or later. Individuals must be able to obtain required retainability for desired AFSCs.

d. Assignment availability code date or date eligible for return from overseas, or DEROS, is Aug. 4 or earlier or has an indefinite DEROS (original DEROS must expire on or before Aug. 4). Wing commander may recommend a DEROS curtailment of up to six months.

e. Their controlled duty assignment date expires on or before Aug. 4.

f. Assignment limitation code "O," selective re-enlistment bonus, expires on or before Aug. 4 or the retraining AFSC has an equal or higher SRB.

g. They are not projected for retirement, assignment or retraining.

h. They must have a re-enlistment eligibility code in a one or three series.

i. Overall rating of three or higher on last enlisted performance report.

j. They should be a U.S. citizen.

k. They should possess a five (three skill level if no five skill level exists) or above skill level in their corresponding AFSCs.

l. They should have no unfavorable information file on file with codes "2" or "3" (UIF code "1" is acceptable)

m. They should not have any pending action under article 15, or punishment including any period of suspension, under article 15 that has not been completed.

Officer development teams up, running

By Maj. John Thomas
Air Force Personnel Center
Public Affairs

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFPN) — Every officer career field now has development teams set up to vector officer career development.

"They're up and running," said Col. Kathleen Grabowski, chief of assignment policy at the Air Force Personnel Center.

"They're applying a great deal of collective officer career experience to each Air Force Specialty Code and providing vectors to individual officers."

That feedback will be posted in the "Development Team" block on officers' online officer development plans, currently called the t-ODP, which replaced the former preference worksheet.

"Not all career fields are the same size and therefore not all officers will get the same type of scrutiny at every stage of their careers," Col. Grabowski said. "Smaller career fields, with fewer jobs available may give individual feedback to captains, while some bigger career fields will find it more effective to give vectors only to majors and above, and to let assignments officers work the details of other officers' jobs directly with the individual and guided by the career planning diagram.

"These teams are the linchpins of force development," Col. Grabowski said. "They will try to identify needs of the career field, and available training and educational opportunities, and set-up a plan that assignments officers can use to match the right person to the right job at the right time."

Each specialty code was represented when development teams convened for the first time this fall, meeting the deadline set by the chief of staff last year, said Col. Dave Nuckles, deputy chief of assignment programs and procedures.

"The development teams are all

Base housing announcement

It is important to clean falling leaves, as they clog drains, choke heating units and are fire and safety hazards. Clear yard drain inlets by removing the drain gate or lid and clean out leaves, dirt and debris. Unclog drains with running water from your hose. Yard inspections will continue throughout the fall and winter, and excessive leaf buildup will be considered a discrepancy. Questions concerning yard inspection policies can be directed to the housing management office at 634-4961, 4963 or 4964.

Three Rivers Chapter of the American Red Cross offers community first aid and safety class every third Saturday, starting Saturday. This class, which costs $60, includes adult, child and infant CPR and first aid. All books are included.

The class will be held in the family support center's large classroom from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Home buying seminar

Learn what's needed to make a wise decision at the home buying seminar Wednesday from 6 to 8:30 p.m. People can learn about advantages and disadvantages of home ownership, real estate agents, commissions, VA, FHA, conventional and adjustable rate mortgages, mortgage insurance premiums, private mortgage insurance, down payments, property taxes, closing costs, discount points and much more. This workshop is free.

Basic investments

Investing wisely today can help establish a secure future. Learn how in basic investments, Thursday, from 2 to 4 p.m. This is the first part of the two-part investment series, and provides information on various investment vehicles, risk assessment and evaluation and basic investment strategies. Each class requires a separate sign up.

Mutual Funds and You

Mutual Funds and You is Friday from 2 to 4 p.m. In this second of the two-part investment series, learn the basics of investing for first timers, pros vs. cons of various types of mutual funds, how to evaluate funds, and how to compare and select your investments.

Sponsorship training

Sponsorship training is held Thursdays from 3 to 4 p.m.

iarize yourself with the command and control structure and don't hesitate to ask questions or engage in problem-solving an exercise input."

Phase II OREs happen at a fictional forward deployed Base X. This base can be anywhere in the world depending on the exercise scenario. No matter what country the scenario calls for, Base X is always a bare-base.

"There will be certain amenities at Base X in place in order for you to do your job rather than worrying about setting up your work environment," said Col. Winstead. "Yet, because it's bare-base you'll have to pack everything you'll need to get the job done. If you don't bring it, you can't count on it being there."

"Look around you during daily operations and list the things you find useful," said Col. Winstead. "Think about how your area in Base X can be efficiently organized. Ask yourself how the change in location will affect your processes and figure out work-arounds for the limitations."

All personal equipment that should be brought will be directed in the special instructions that precede all exercises, said Mr. Taft. Normally, the list includes personal gear, battle dress uniforms, web belt, helmet, canteen and training chemical gear.

"When operating out of Base X the hardest thing for most people is the mental shift required to participate in a combat exercise," said Mr. Taft. "Unfortunately, there are a lot of artificialities in order to save money or resources."

The best advice to succeed in an exercise, said Mr. Taft is: "when in doubt, do what you normally would do and do what makes sense." That's what the IG is looking for; a sound, logical thought process that is safe.

Each person can help the wing succeed during the ORI if they know their regulations, said Col. Winstead. Compliance with published guidance is the one thing Inspector General teams are definitely going to review.

Another thing to watch out for is lack of communication across organizational lines. This is often the root cause of many problems, said Col. Winstead. Pass helpful info to other organizations.

Be careful about trying to hide things, said Mr. Taft, because the IG knows all the tricks. "It's best to get things out in the open to get help fixing the problem, and if you can't fix it at the unit level, elevate it."

"If you do something exceptionally good, however, you could be named as an Outstanding Performer," said Mr. Taft. "Which gets you mentioned in the official report and could give you good performance report bullets."

"We've got less than a year to prepare the 9th Reconnaissance Wing for our ORI," said Col. Devine. "The task ahead of us is daunting, but I look forward to the opportunity to work with Team Beale's warriors and showcase this truly outstanding wing."

"When the ACC IG Team arrives in November, we're going to show the ACC commander Team Beale has every detail nailed and is ready, willing, and able to go to war again," said Col. Devine.

bilities, are real missions for the future. We have a legacy in those missions that we're proud of, but our most exciting days are ahead of us."

During his visit, Gen. Lord conducted a commander's call for 7th SWS personnel at the Air Force Combat Ammunition Center. The general also visited the 548th Intelligence Group, where he received a 9th Reconnaissance Wing unit mission briefing, Global Hawk update and 548th IG mission briefing. He finished his visit at Distributed Ground Station-2 with a tour of the tech pad and at the 9th Intelligence Squadron where he viewed the procedures for wet film processing.

"I think the missile warning, space control and space surveillance missions are critical to our space superiority and what I saw at the 7th Space Warning Squadron is certainly indicative of that," said Gen. Lord. "Plus, General Wright and his team with offensive intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance are key to superiority. There is a natural synthesis of capabilities here ... I was really impressed with everybody I saw!"

Gen. Lord has been the AFSPC commander since April 2002. He is responsible for the development, acquisition and operation of the Air Forces space and missile systems.

The general oversees a global network of satellite command and control, communications, missile warning and launch facilities, and ensures the combat readiness of America's intercontinental ballistic missile force. He leads more than 39,700 space professionals who provide combat forces and capabilities to North American Aerospace Defense Command and U.S. Strategic Command.

Services is "all ears" for your input

SAN ANTONIO, Texas--Ever wish someone would really listen to your wants and needs? Well, Headquarters Air Force Services is all ears. Every year, they conduct a Customer Feedback Survey to assess customer satisfaction with Services programs. The responses from this survey help drive policy and program decisions.

If you were randomly chosen to receive this survey, now's your chance to let your opinions be known. Air Force Services is committed to combat support and community service and offers many programs to improve quality of life for Air Force Families. These surveys let Services know what they are doing right and where things can be improved.

Your responses will help make a difference in the programs Services offers to you...

The survey is a very important customer feedback tool. Please take the time to fill it out and return it in the envelope provided. Your responses will help make a difference in the programs Services offers to you, your family, and the entire Beale AFB community. If you have any questions, please contact your 9th Services Marketing representative, Sharon Minter at 634-5407.

This survey has been reviewed and approved for distribution by the Air Force Personnel Survey Branch at the Air Force Personnel Center. The survey control number is USAF SCN 03-088.

Sign up for Teen Aviation Camp

Air Force Services, in conjunction with the United States Air Force Academy (USAFA), will conduct the fifth Air Force Teen Aviation Camp, June 5th-11th, 2004. The camp is for students who will be sophomores or juniors in high school during the 2004-2005 school year. This program is for eligible youth program users (per AFI 34-262) who are interested in attending the Air Force Academy or making the Air Force a career.

Interested teens can pick up a packet at the Youth Center and must complete the application form and familiarization exam, and submit the package to the Youth Center by Wednesday, February 25th, 2004. Applicants should list their extracurricular and school based activities for the past 2 years only, along with verification of participation. An interview will be conducted by the Youth Center staff, which will be held on Friday, February 27th, 2004 at the Youth Center at 4 p.m.

Thirty-six teens will be selected to attend the Aviation Camp in Colorado. If selected, teens will participate in a wide variety of classroom and outdoor activities.

For more information, please call Mr. Clarome Teria at 634-5117.

Capt. Jeff Wright

99th RS newest qualified U-2 pilot
Previous aircraft flown: WC-130H/J at
Air Force Reserves, Keesler Air Force Base, Miss.

Q: Why did you apply to the U-2 program?

A: I applied to the U-2 program because of its continually on-going operational missions, but also because I've wanted to fly the U-2 ever since I read about the aircraft as a child.

Q: What do you like best about being a U-2 pilot?

A: The fact that this aircraft and all the people within the U-2 program are an integral part of the security of the United States.

Q: How does being a U-2 pilot differ from your previous flying assignment?

A: My last mission was to fly directly into hurricanes to gather data that was disseminated to help save lives and property. The U-2 mission also gathers data that is disseminated to help save the lives of our troops, but more importantly, is vital to the security of our nation. I enjoyed my last assignment thoroughly, but I've been looking forward to flying the U-2 for a much longer time than any other aircraft I've seen or flown.

Education center

The Beale Training and Education Center offers an extensive array of on-base programs. Call 634-2525 for more information on these programs and/or to schedule an appointment with a counselor. The center is open Mondays to Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Fridays from 9 a.m. until noon.

Air Force education records

The Beale Training and Education Center no longer maintains hardcopy education records. If military members have an education record on file, they can stop by the education center and pick it up.

University of Phoenix Registration

The University of Phoenix is geared toward working adults, allowing military members to complete their degree in about two to three years by attending one night of instructor-led facilitation and one night of group interaction. The University of Phoenix is currently registering for the bachelor in science business, management beginning Jan. 29. Registration deadline is today. The University is also registering for the bachelor of science in human services beginning Feb. 29. Registration deadline is Feb. 16.

Make an appointment with the college advisor and map out your educational goals.

Contact Josie Banez today at 788-7810 or email at josie.banez@phoenix.edu.

VA education benefits information

The Veterans Administration toll-free number for VA education benefits information is 1-888-442-4551. An alternative to calling the VA is to use the VA education service web site: <http://www.gibill.va.gov>.

Some of the general information people want, such as current benefit rates and general program eligibility requirements, is posted on the Web site. For more specific questions, people may select the "ask a question" option. Their questions will go directly to one of the four VA regional processing offices (Atlanta, Buffalo, Muskogee, and St. Louis) that process

VA education benefit claims. Based on the information provided, the system will automatically route the inquiry to the correct VA office.

A notice on the web site states a response will be sent within 10 working days, but it is often much faster - sometimes the same day.

For general VA benefit questions that do not deal with education, call 1-800-827-1000. The VA Web site is <http://www.va.gov>.

Surfing the web for scholarships

This school year is one in which students saw the highest hikes in tuition fees in recent years. Even though most service members have tuition assistance and in-service VA benefits, there are those who must look for additional financial aid for themselves or for members of their families. They need to be aware that there are free scholarship databases, such as <http://www.scholarships.com> and <http://www.fastweb.com>

Also <http://www.collegeboard.com> has information on scholarships and other types of financial aid. Additionally, service members shouldn't forget that the free application for federal student aid is at <http://www.fafsa.ed.gov>

The Aerospace Education Foundation Air Force spouse scholarship

The Air Force Spouses Scholarship program provides financial assistance to 30 Air Force (active duty, Reserve or Guard) spouses worldwide to pursue associate or bachelor undergraduate or graduate and post-graduate degrees. Each recipient receives $1,000. Deadline for application is Jan. 30.

Find out more about the program or get a scholarship application at:

<http://www.aef.org/aid/spouse.asp>.

in the process of setting up the frequency and location of future meetings, depending on what best suits each career field," Col. Grabowski said.

One of their first tasks was to determine appropriate developmental vectors for officers completing commander tours and officers finishing developmental education programs, Col. Nuckles said. Future DT meetings will also address officers who are projected to move during their normal assignment cycles.

Under force development, Air Force officials are seeking to build pools of experienced people to be ready to fill important jobs at each level across the Air Force.

Development teams chart typical career paths and give officers feedback about what jobs, education and training will help them develop the capabilities to prepare them for future Air Force assignments.

Most teams consist of the career field manager, various colonels from within the career field community and an assignment officer from the personnel center. Not necessarily the same people will meet each time.

"Although there are some 'core' members of every DT, membership should be flexible enough to ensure the right leaders are present for each meeting," Col. Grabowski said.

So far, most teams are still organizing and focusing on logistical processes and parameters for how and to whom they will give guidance.

"As always, it's more of an art than a science," she said. "And we've gotten positive feedback from the teams that they are pleased to have the latitude to mold their DT processes to their career field as needed." (Courtesy of AFPC News Service)

Football season ends with another 9th MUNS trophy

By Maj. Jeffery Meserve
9th MUNS commander

9th Munitions Squadron safety Ken Frank intercepted a pass to secure the 2003 Flag Football championship against the 9th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, 21-7.

Entering the 2003 season, it was up to that same team to prove the 2002 season was not a fluke, and what better way to do it than going through the season undefeated.

The playoffs got off to a rocky start when the 9th Civil Engineer Squadron gave AMMO their first loss. This did not come at a good time because losing in the first round means having to win six straight games to repeat as champions.

AMMO did however bounce back the following night by scraping out a victory over the 9th Medical Group B team, but it was apparent the team was not playing up to the standard set early in the season. AMMO returned from the Thanksgiving holiday break with a new outlook and a focus of playing each game to the fullest.

As the playoff bracket continued to fill out, one team after another fell out of the tournament. The end of the season was a rematch of last year's championship game, 9th MUNS vs. 9th AMXS. Only this time the AMMO team would have to win back to back to reclaim the title.

The championship game lived up to its hype. AMMO got out to a 14-point lead before AMXS came storming right back. Each team exchanged punches for the remainder of the game, but when it ended, AMMO had earned the right to play one more game.

The intensity in the second game was cranked up to the fullest, and once again AMMO got out to a quick 14-point lead thanks to an amazing run by Chello Bustillos and a circus-like touchdown catch by Sean Strick. AMXS bounced right back with a touchdown and threatened to tie up the game early in the second half, but Frank stepped in front of a receiver and picked off the pass to thwart an AMXS drive.

It was clear over the past two years these two teams had developed a competitive rivalry for one another. Soon after the pushing turned into handshakes and each team congratulated one another on a fine season.

AMMO then worked its way to the center of the field to honor an old tradition of chanting its AMMO call for all to hear.

NDI lab ensures U-2 safety at 70,000+

By Master Sgt. Tim Helton
9th RW Public Affairs

U-2 pilots depend on the structural integrity of their aircraft during missions regularly flown above 70,000 feet and exceeding eight hours. One maintenance organization is dedicated to finding microscopic defects, undetectable by visual inspection, before they become catastrophic events.

Enter the nondestructive inspection laboratory. NDI technicians inspect aircraft and support equipment using ultrasound, radiographic, dye penetrant, magnetic particle and eddy current to identify or verify suspected cracks and other structural faults that could lead to part failure or jeopardize safety.

“Aircraft defects that can’t be seen by the naked eye can be the most damaging,” said Col. John Dufresne, 9th Maintenance Group commander. “The NDI laboratory uses specialized training and state-of-the-art technology to assess the condition of the aircraft before and after each flight. They are a vital link in the “Kill Chain” ensuring both safe and reliable aircraft are available to locate the enemy.”

One of the most used processes in the NDI lab is the spectrometric analysis, which measure minute amounts of metal contained in the lubricating oil of jet engines.

“This analysis can pinpoint components that may start to wear at accelerated rates, which could lead to engine failure if not detected early,” said Master Sgt. Diego Naranjo, 9th Maintenance Squadron NDI section chief. “This is critical in keeping the U-2 safe while in the air.”

The bottom line for the NDI lab is to scientifically analyze components to ensure maximum use without putting an aircraft at risk.

“We multiply reliability by ensuring systems or components are in serviceable condition,” said Sgt. Naranjo. “This enhances aircraft flight and personnel safety, and saves money by getting maximum use from components before replacing them.”

Being a science-based section used to keep aircraft flying has its challenges, and it starts with understanding the available technology.

“Our career field deals with a lot of science based technology and requires careful attention to detail,”

“The instruments are the tools, but the technicians are the most important aspect in the inspection process. Understanding the science and being able to make accurate interpretations from the information the instruments provide is crucial.”

Master Sgt. Diego Naranjo
NDI section chief said Sgt. Naranjo. “The instruments are the tools, but the technicians are the most important aspect in the inspection process. Understanding the science and being able to make accurate interpretations from the information the instruments provide is crucial.”

To keep current on the more than $1 million worth of equipment assigned to the shop, Sgt. Naranjo said NDI technicians are trained in multiple inspection disciplines to provide continuous inspection capability both at Beale and deployed locations.

“To gain the expertise needed, every technician attends an initial 10 weeks of technical training and completes an in-depth on-the-job program as well as other specialized training as needed.”

And as with most jobs, NDI technicians deploy in support of the U-2 and other Air Force missions. The 12-person shop has at least two members deployed at all times. When they deploy they know what to expect; increased responsibility.

“When we deploy our primary job doesn’t change. We still do engine internal condition monitoring by analyzing engine oil samples in our spectrometers,” said Sgt. Naranjo.

“However, we normally deploy alone, which puts a lot of responsibility on the technician. They become solely responsible for verifying scheduled inspections during the aircraft Phase inspection process and also verification of suspected conditions detected by crew chiefs or other system specialists.”

Although their primary duty is to ensure successful aircraft missions, they are also available to inspect other equipment on base.

“We can perform inspections on support equipment managed or assigned to base organizations,” said Sgt. Naranjo. “Most of our other customers are from the fire department, logistics readiness squadron, and test measurement and diagnostic equipment laboratory.”

Through all the different aspects of their job, one thing remains clear for the warriors working in the NDI lab.

“We share responsibility for the safe and successful operation of some of our nation’s most valuable assets,” said Sgt. Naranjo. “We strive to give pilots peace of mind knowing they have a sound and aircraft, so they can focus on their mission.”

Rhinos prep Dragon

(Counterclockwise) Staff Sgt. Glen Smith, 940th Civil Engineer Squadron structural journeyman, gathers wooden beams that will be used for construction of the new hardback tents in Dragon Town. The 9th CES crew started early Tuesday to finish the project before the end of the week.

Staff Sgt. Shawn Meyer, 9th CES structural journeyman, constructs a training center.

Staff Sgt. John Ertel, 940th CES pavement and equipment operator, gathers up demolished wood using an all-terrain forklift to make way for a new tent to be built.

Airman 1st Class Jeffrey Heisinger, 9th CES electrician apprentice, traces a wire used to provide power to the new receptacles installed in the training center.
